From large keynotes to small group trainings.

The Can I Kiss You? program instills 3 key messages:

Asking First to ensure consent and respecting the answer.
Result: Students respect boundaries for themselves and their partners.

Bystander Intervention to STOP sexual assaults before they happen, especially involving the use of alcohol and/or drugs. Result: A safer campus for everyone.

Opening a Door for sexual assault survivors to come forward and be properly supported. Result: More survivors on campus gain the support needed to help them move forward in every aspect of their life.

Colleges and Universities: Can I Kiss You? Presentation

"The 'Can I Kiss You?' program was exactly what we were looking for - packed with important information, but presented in a way that excited and engaged the audience.

Overcoming the students' natural desire to avoid hard topics and even defenses against hearing critiques of one's own culture is a hurdle Mike clears most effectively."

Mary Todd, Kansas State University

"Going All the Way with..." Workshop

In this unique "Train the Trainer" style session, each participant will discover specific skills for better engaging students in essential conversations around sensitive topics.

"Mike was able to adapt to the students needs and concerns, namely how to talk about sexual violence with one's peer group. He answered questions in a manner that did not minimize the challenges they face in confronting difficult audiences."

Karla Fonner, Bridge Project Coordinator
Slippery Rock University

Talk Back Session

After his main program, have Mike lead a Q&A with the audience to dive deeper into areas the audience would like to learn more about.

"We invited student leaders in positions as Resident Assistants, Orientation leaders, Greek Life members, and Campus Activities to the Talk Back session with Mike. Mike gave our student leaders some great tools for facilitating difficult conversations! The role playing Mike had students do was especially effective in creating real situations our student leaders find themselves in when dealing with alcohol, sexual violence, and other "hot" topics. Our students left the program feeling confident in their ability to navigate these conversations in the future."
